8. What were the strengths of this learning experience?

The amount of hands-on knowledge you get in this rotation as a result of daily rounds, topic discussions, and gaining familiarity with new orders is definitely a strength. I feel like this rotation is what tied all of my year-long knowledge together and took it to the next level. Having three critical care-trained pharmacists also contributed to this experience because they all were able to teach me in their own ways that made sense to me. The organized schedule (mini topic presentations, topics, meetings, etc.) was super helpful to keep me on track.

9. What were the weaknesses of this learning experience?

One weakness is having this rotation at the end of the year (well, this is a strength and a weakness). For me about to transition into my ED practice, this was the perfect rotation to end on. However, looking at it from a resident's learning perspective - the amount of knowledge you get from this rotation would really enhance the experience of the other rotations. I do think some of the topics (depending where the resident is in their year, and what their targeted role is as after residency) could be adjusted to meet the needs of the specific resident (maybe have a running list of topics - ones that are required, and ones that could be substituted out).

10. What suggestions can you make to improve this learning experience?

The mini-dose presentation in central is somewhat distracting. We are fortunate to have a very nice, accommodating conference room that could be used to deliver this presentation without it being so awkward. Also, given the low stakes of the mini dose, I'm not sure sending the drafts to three people for three different sets of edits is warranted. I would recommend maybe only having one person provide edits as all of my preceptors are highly qualified to provide feedback on an individual basis.

11. Overall Comments

This has been the most challenging yet rewarding rotation. Every day I woke up at 445am to come in thinking "not again" but at the end of the week I always leave feeling grateful for the opportunity and the knowledge I have gained on this rotation. I appreciate Sue, Bill, and Kelly for all of their work in making this rotation what it has been for me these past 5 weeks.
